Dear Parents/Guardians

Re: Year 12 Pre-Public Examinations

You are probably aware that Year 12 students have spent the last couple of months preparing for their Year 12 Pre-Public Examinations, which are taking place in class time in the week beginning Monday 3rd June.

While these exams do not directly count towards students final A-Level grades (as they are internal exams), they are still very important because:

- They are a great opportunity for teachers to see exactly where all students are at, which enables them to target their support in the areas that the students need it most.
- They help to inform teachers' judgements for UCAS predicted grades, which are seen by universities and other post-18 providers when students apply.

The finalised schedule for the exams, which is also being shared with students, can be seen below. Students should continue to attend all of their tutorials and lessons throughout the week as normal, unless the timetable says that one of their lessons has been specifically cancelled to accommodate an exam.
